Old Letters.

BY J. BOYLE O'REILLY.

Old Letters! Old Letters! ye bear me back
To the sunbright spots on a chequred track;
Ye are telegraph cords that cleave the night,
And stretch far away to the gleaming light,
Ye have souls, Old Letters, with pinions broad,
That scatter the mist from Life's hazy road,
And follow its bare-laid, sinuous train,
As a surgeon's knife does a winding vein.

Old Letters! Old Letters! the power ye sway
Is the Ghost of the Time that has passed away
In the gloom, 'mid a waste of graves, it stands,
And ye [illegible] to trace with its shadowy hands,
On the darkness, a joy or a face of light,
Then ye point with a smile to the mocking sight,
That shows through the night in its camera ring,
While ye scatter the mist with your sweeping wing.

Old Letters! ye summon the far off years
As if thirsty to drink of our pent-up tears.
Of dead friends, dead joys, and dead hopes ye speak,
In a warning voice 'gainst the things we seek,
Ye bid us be wise and to cherish the light
That its rays may be with us in future night:
Ye point to the joys that alone can last,—
And your voice is the sorrowful Voice of the Past.

Selected Story.

Ulryc's Horse.

A STORY FROM THE FRENCH.

Jean d'Ostcamp lived near Bruges, in a manor or castle, which has now disappeared; in what manner we shall presently see. The site it occupied afterward became part of the city. The events we are about to relate occurred in 1114, during the reign of Bandouin a la Hache, a valient prince and a great lover of justice. Although he had made severe laws against the misdeeds of the lords of the different castles, and his lightest chastisement was to punish pœna talion is, is, that is, head for head and limb for limb, as Oredgherst observes, there were, nevertheless, many lords who were petty tyrants in their own domains. Whenever Baudouin heard of their tyranny, he quickly put a stop to it. But he did not know all.

Lord Jean d'Ostcamp greviously oppressed his vassals. He did this with impunity, believing himself secure of protection, as his brother Pierre was one of the count's knights. He was a miser and so wicked that none dared bring a complaint against him. He had purchased many yards of cloth and linen from a retail merchant of Bruges for the necessities of his household. The price of these goods constituted half of the merchant's fortune. The baron refused to pay him, and consequently the business affairs of the poor merchanic were cramped for want of this money.

This state of things lasted ten years, and then, in the above-mentioned year, 1114; the merchant died. In order to pay his debts to the weavers of the city his widow was obliged to sell everything, and she found herself left with two children of tender age and nothing to depend upon for their support except the money which was due to her from Jean d'Ostcamp. Three times she went to ask him for it, and three times did he cause her to be turned out of his castle.

If she had been left alone, the poor, grief-stricken woman would have given up all hope of ever obtaining her money, and have found employment in some weaver's shop, thus supporting herself by the sweat of her brow. But how could she support her children? Maternal love determined her to brave the terror with which the baron inspired her.

The Count of Flanders, Baudouin a la Hache, happened to be at Bruges, and she went to the door of Saint Donat, where he was hearing mass, and waited for him. When he appeared she threw herself at his feet and told him all her troubles. Boudouin, while listening to her story, mechanically put his hand on his terrible ax. Then reflecting that it was not a crime, but a misdemeanor, he restrained himself and said kindly to the widow:

"Send one of the beadles of Bruges to the castle of Jean d'Ostcamp immediately, and to-morrow let me know the result of his missson."

The good woman went away. But among all the officers appointed by the count to administer his laws in Bruges, there was not one who dared to go to the castle of Jean. The widow returned the next day to the door of Saint Donat, and related all that had passed to Boudouin.

"So they fear a man who does not fear the laws," said the count; "I shall send Ulryck, one of my servants, and we shall see what this fellow will say to him. Tell him of your troubles my poor woman."

The little man approached the widow. He was a native of Flanders, and was calm and gentle in his manners. He was below medium highth; his countenance pale but animated, and expressive of kindness and good nature, and his eyes were bright and piercing. Under the title of sergeant, he was intrusted with the execution of the count's vigorous orders; in short, his duties were similar to those of the beadles of that time, now called les huissers. These duties were little suited to his character, but circumstances had placed him in this situation.

"So this man refuses to pay you?" said he, gently, to the good woman.

"Yes," replied the widow, "and none of the civil officers of Bruges dare present the [illegible] to him."

"I will go to him myself," said the little man.

The grateful woman raised her eyes to Ulryck and said, with deep emotion; "You are very good, but you are not strong. Do you not fear Monseigneur Jean d'Ostcamp? He is a powerful lord."

"Oh! I do not fear him," said Ulrick "I shall carry my lion's staff, and the ax of the powerful count is on my sleeve. He will respect me as an officer of his sovereign. Return home my good woman and after the holy mass I will deliver your message, and in three hours at most you will receive justice."

The widow thanked Ulryck, and went away, her heart oppressed with many conflicting emotions and presentiments.

As soon as he had heard mass, Ulryck hastened back to the count's castle, and going to the stable he saddled and bridled his little horse, took his ebony staff, on the top of which was a silver lion, and set out for the estate of Jean d'Ostcamp.

Horses of good beed ordinarily have a quality which, for want of a better name, we call instinct, and which often stands them in better stead than our intelligence does us. A horse will stop at the entrance of a forest invested by wolves, and nothing will induce him to cross a forest if he scents the presence of a tiger. Min (this was the name of Ulryc's little horse) possessed in a marked degree the tact or instinct of which we speak.

The poor animal seemed to foster peril, if not to himself at least to his master. The sergeant had never been able to induce him to go into battle. This little horse did not like danger, but he deeply loved Ulric, who returned affection for affection. He cared for Min himself, morning and evening, filled his rack, spread his bed and groomed him, and the animal accustomed to the man, recognized him from afar, saluting him by neighing, turning his head to look after him, and sadly lowering his ears when Ulryck was out of sight. If the seargent was absent and a strange hand brought hay or oats to him, the animal seemed to be afflicted and would not eat. None but his master ever mounted him.

Min at times took inexplicable whims; for instance, he would often choose a longer and more difficult road in preference to a shorter and easier one. Ulryck, who had never been able to conquer the obstinacy of his little horse on this point, usually allowed him to have his own way. "Min knows what he is about," the sergent would say; "if he wants to carry me on the right hand, which is longer, and increases his trouble, it is because he scents danger on the left-hand road."

But when duty required, Ulryck had a means of vanquishing the obstinacy of Min. He would dismount and proceed on foot, leaving Min to follow or to go back, as he chose, and the poor animal never failed to follow his master like a dog. If any obstacle seperated them, as soon as he could overcome it, Min would find Ulryck and rejoin him no matter how great the crowd, and if Ulryck ever started on an excursion alone, and any one during his absence opened the stable door, Min would follow on his track to the distance of half league from Bruges, for the expedition of the sergeant never extended further than that. Every one in the city knew the little horse and could approach him but he would allow no one either to catch or mount him.

We mention all these details because they were remarkable; let us also add, what Ulryck had often observed, viz.: That on every occasion that Min had refused to go, Ulryck had encountered dangers. Once during a fight with the rebellious baron, his horse refusing to march, Ulryck had gone on foot and was severely wounded. Many examples were cited.

On the occasion of which we write, Min showed himself more restive than usual. He pranced in a very unruly manner through the streets of Burges, and when they reached the outskirts of the city the little animal stopped, refusing so decidedly to take the road to Jean d'Oscamp's castle that Ulryck became angry. He had no spurs; they were then worn as a distinctive badge by knights only. But if he had had one it would not have availed with Min. He spoke to him in a threatening tone, but the horse only lowared his head. Ulryck then struck him with his ebony staff, but immediately regretted it. Min only lovered his head still more, and remained immovable.

"Min," said he at last, speaking to the animal as if he were endowed with intelligence, "we go by the order of the count of Flanders, and we carry the black staff of the silver lion; they will respect us."

Min's only response was to turn toward the city they had just quitted.

"This is very cowardly," said the sergeant; "you show very little courage, Min; we are under the protection of Baudouin a la Hache;" and so saying, he dismounted.

"Go back, my poor Min, if you are afraid," he said, "as for me, I must do my duty."

And he started on foot. Min reluctantly followed, with his head lowered to the ground. On arriving at the gate of the castle, of which the portcullis was down, Ulryck blew a small horn which hung on a post

"Who is there?" said a soldier appearing.

"An officer of Monseigneur Baudouin a la Hache, the redoubtable Count of Flanders."

The portcullis was instantly raised, and Ulryck entered the castle. Passing through the court, which was narrow, and surrounded by high walls, he almost fancied himself in a prison. The soldier or servant, who had drawn up the portcuilis, conducted him into a large hall in which was Jean d'Oscamp. This hall was forty feet long and twenty-five feet wide, and its only ceiling was the roof, composed of great tiles laid on heavy timbers. A massive table occupied the center, and on each side of it were deal benches. The bare brick walls were garnished with arms, nets, and wolf-skins. On a rude platform at one end of the hall was a complete suit of iron armor for a knight, which was supported by a wooden manikin. At the other end of the hall, before a large chimney, in which burned the trunk of a tree, was Lord Jean d'Ostcamp, seated on a stool which was painted black and surrounded by three servants. He wore a cap made of the skin of a hare small-clothes of coarse green cloth, and wooden shoes, and for a coat he wore a sort of tunic or blouse, confined by a black belt from which depended, on the right a great knife and on the left a short but heavy ax.

A pot of beer and some slices of buttered bread were placed before him on a block, which served as a portable table. The floor, not being paved, was strewed with fresh straw. Under the table were two large dogs, which growled at the approach of Ulrick, but became quite at a word from their master.

This description may give the reader some idea of a seignoral manor at the beginning of the twelfth century. The luxury introduced by the crusades was just commencing to be adopted by a few privaledged houses.

When the servant appeared, Jean d'Ostcamp without saying a word, offered him the pot of beer and a slice of bread, for it was the usual custom.

"I cannot accept anything, my lord," said Ulryck, "until my message is delivered."

"You come from Count Baudouin," said Jean d'Osteaamp, "what do you want?"

"I am here," replied the sergeant, as "a public officer of justice of my lord, to demand payment of your debt to a certain merchant of Bruges. None of the officers of the city daring to come, it is to me the Monseignur the very redoubtable Count of Flanders has referred the widow of the said merchant.'

"These things do not concern the count," said the baron roughly.

"All justice concerns him, my lord,' replied the sergent; "and by the staff of the lion, and the name of God and justice, I command you to immediate pay into my hands the sum due, or to follow me before the city judge, to be condemned for the said sum, and to remain in prison until fully paid, for such is the law."

Ulryck had no time to say more, for the face of the baron became purple with rage at the last words of the summons He arose, stamoring with anger.

"Miserable slave! put me in prison!"

He sprung at the servant, and, pushing him violently out of the hall, shut the door and sat down on the stool, nearly beside himself with rage.

Ulryck felt that he was performing a stern duty, and not wishing to return until he had fully discharged it, he placed his ebony staff in a pocket made for the purpose in the housing of Min, who was waiting for him. He then took out an inkstand, a pen, and a sheet of parchment, and proceeded to write out a summons; for he knew how to write, which was a rare accomplishment in those days among the officers of justice.

Before nailing it to Jean d'Ostcamp's door, he read it aloud in a tremulous but solemn voice, calling, in the name of the very redoubtable Count of Flanders, on all the servants, vassals, and peasants of the castle to assist in enforcing justice; to apprehend the said baron and conduct him to prison, under penalty of being treated as felons and rebels.

At the moment that he finished his bold undertaking, Jean d'Ostcamp, utterly beside himself with rage, rushed out of the door, ax in hand, and seeing Ulryck preparing to nail the summons on his door he split his head. Ulryck staggered, but he had strength enough to drag himself to his little horse, and put the summons, all stained with his blood, into the pocket, and then he fell and breathed his last sigh.

Seeing the fall of the count's officer checked the fury of Jean d'Ostcamp. to the portcullis, closed and to take Min to the stables. But the little horse, as if understanding all that had passed, suddenly dashed out of the castle before the portcullis fell. The gates were closed, and in order to obliterate all traces of the crime which had been committed, the baron's servants hastily dug a grave and buried Ulryck.

In the meantime, Min reached Bruges. and stopped at the count's door. Baudouin was dining with some of his knights when a servant informed him that Ulryck's horse had returned alone, bringing both the ebony staff and a bloody parchment in the pocket of his horsing. The Count of Flanders took the parchment, and, hoping to find Ulryck only wounded, he mounted his horse and, attended by knights, set out for the castle of Jean d'Ostcamp. So deeply was he absorbed in the thought of his sergeant, that he did not observe that Min was following the cortege.

In less than two hours after the murder took place, the Count of Flanders was at the gates of the castle. The portcullis was drawn up; all trace of the crime had disappeared. Jean d'Oscamp, who had forseen this visit, was prepared for it; he had assumed a serene countenance.

"I come," said Baudouin, sternly, "to demand my Sergeant Ulryck of you."

"No one has been here," said the Barron, boldly; "your attendants may search the castle."

"What!" cried the Count, "did not Ulryck write you this summons, and order you to make restoration to the widow?"

Jean d'Ostcamp coldly took the summons, and seeing it was stained with blood, calmly remarked:

"This summons is certainly intended for me, but you see, my lord, that it is stained with blood. It is possible that your Ulryck has been assassinated on his way hither."

"And who, would dare to do it but you," said Baudouin; "he carried the 'lions staff,' and he was under my protection. Knights, search the castle, and question the servants and all whom you may find."

While the suit of the count were executing the orders, Jean d'Ostcamp remained with his sovereign, excusing himself, protesting that he meant to pay the widow, and speaking with so much assurance that Baudouin began to believe him innocent. This belief was strengthened when the knights reappeared without having discovered or learned anything. Baudouin, deeply perplexed at the commission of a crime of which he had lost all trace, was about to retire. He cast a last scrutinizing glance on Jean d'Ostcamp, when he saw the baron suddenly change countenance and become deadly pale, while he seemed incapable of withdrawing his eyes from the most distant angle of the court-yard. Following their direction, Baudouin beheld Min, that he supposed at Bruges, busily engaged in scraping up the soil with his forefeet; it had evidently been freshly turned. He approached and saw great tears in the eyes of the little animal. He ordered his attendants to dig there, and they soon found the body of Ulryck.

Jean d'Ostcamp, seeing that his crime was discovered, sought to escape, but was seized by the count's attendants.. He fell on his knees and begged for mercy But the justice of Baudouin a la Hache was inexorable. He ordered him to be led out of the castle, and there, on the public highway, he condemned him to die. Then seizing the bridle of the little horse, he said:

"Be comforted my poor Min; thou shalt avenge thy master."

Two knights, immediately comprehending the count's intentson, took Jean d'Ostcamp's ax and poignard away from him, while two others tied his hands and feet, after which they tied him to the tail of the little horse—which, for the first time in his life began to kick; then rushing through brambles and bushes, soon tore the murderer of his master in pieces, and returned to the city the same evening, bringing only some hideous fragments.

The castle was destroyed by order of the count; the widow's debt was paid; and a mass for 100 years was instituted at St. Donat for the repose of Ulryck's soul.

Baudouin had the horse placed in his stables, intending to take care of him for the sake of his master; but the fatigue of the day proved too much for him, and the next morning they found him dead.—Kansas Monthly.

The United States Naval Academy. 5.

The course of instruction embraces thirteen departments or schools, as follows:—Seamanship, Gunnery, Mathematics, Steam Enginery, Astronomy and Navigation, Natural and Experimental Philosophy, Ethics and English studies, French, Spanish, Drawing, Fencing, Gymnastics, and Dancing. Each department is in charge of a senior officer, assisted by a number of professors and instructors Seventy-five officers, with an average pay of three thousand dollars each are connected with the institution. This does not include the mates of the ships and the large number of clerks employed in several of the departments. The total number of persons, including officers, midshipmen, clerks, mechanics, laborers and servants, is about eight hundred. The cost to the government for the course of instruction of each graduate from the Academy does not fall short of twenty-five thousand dollars.

THE DISCIPLINE

of the school is usually most excellent. But for two evils it would be perfect. The one is the employment of political influence in order to restore dismissed midshipmen; the other is the removal of officers at the expiration of three years. The Superintendent is usually chosen without any regard to efficiency, and it sometimes happens that he knows more of marline spike seamanship than of modern naval science or the management and discipline of so large a number of young men.

It may be that some young readers of these articles are longing to leave home and kindred, and don the tasteful uniform of the naval cadet. It might be presumptuous in me to offer any advice on this subject—certainly such advice would not be regarded. I content myself, therefore, with bare facts, and suffer them to draw their own conclusions (which latter is most magnanimous on the part of a writer.)

If a youth desires to become a

for Academic honors let him first search his family record and learn whether he is not less than fourteen nor more than eighteen years of age. Assured of his age, he should apply forthwith to his member of congress, who, doubtless, will nominate him for the position should then be a vacancy unless the boy's father failed to vote for him. In such a sad contingency it would not be amiss to write to the President, as thousands of other young aspirants do every year.

THE RULES FOR ADMISSION, which are strictly observed, except when they clash with the interests of some political Cyclops, are briefly these:

Each congressional district and territory is entitled to one representative. The President appoints the candidate from the territory of Columbia, also ten at large, annually, from sons of officers of the army or navy. The nominations of all other candidates are made by the Secretary of the navy on the recommendation of a member or delegate from actual residents of his district. A vacancy occurs in each district only upon the resignation, dismissal, or graduation of its representative in the Academy.

APPLICANTS

must be between fourteen and eighteen years of age and give testimonials of good moral character. They must first undergo a satisfactory physical examination, after which they go before the board of Examiners, consisting of five senior officers and a corps of professors and instructors. The applicants must display a knowledge of grammar, geography, arithmetic, writing and spelling. The examinations, which are both oral and written, are conducted with perfect fairness. But should the candidate fail in both these, he has still a third chance. The seniors of the board to whom the young gentlemen have applied this charming soubriquet, "the Battery," call the rejected one in their presence and thoroughly persuade themselves of his deficiency ere they send him away comfortless. But such is the fear of this formidable "battery" that its shots are nearly always fatal. With greater perturbation than they would evince in entering a drawing room for the first time, or even in charging the veritable cannon's mouth, they enter, and covered with defeat retire ingloriously before the stern warriors of the foamy sea. The successful candidate is immediately notified of his acceptance, and enter at once upon the duties of his office, first depositing the sum required by law (about $300.) Once admitted he is fed and clothed by the government, and on the day he graduates is given a sum sufficient to purchase a complete outfit.

THE COURSE OF STUDY,

which is moderately thorough, includes four years of Academic life. A student must study hard, or he will go home without graduating. Some idea may be formed of the standard of scholarship from the following fact: Of two hundred youths who may apply for admission, but one hundred are received: and of this one hundred not more than twenty-five will graduate. Our youths know the fearful odds against them, yet the desire to hold office is as universal as the epizootic. The best of friends will squabble over a twelve dollar post office, and newspaper men aspire to the presidency. And so our young men are anxious to invest in this lottery which offers but one prize in eight. It is probable that there are on an average one hundred applicants for every vacancy.

THE CADETS

number two hundred and sixty, and represent every type of society, from the New York "wharf rat" full of Irishisms and vulgarity to the refined and dignified son of the stately senator.

But here all distinctions are leveled for the nonce, and rich and poor dwell together in a quasi communism, if I except poor Conyers, the colored cadet from South Carolina. This lad is quick, intelligent, a thorough gentleman in his deportment, yet he is of the accursed race, and so his Anglo-Saxon comrades, who welcome the lordly Japanese students, curl their lips in scorn when they pass him by. The prompt dismissal of Digges for an unprovoked and cowardly assault upon him, put a stop to open acts of outrage, but a petty system of persecution, unseen by the officers, still prevails, and will, I guess, until the end of the chapter.

CONCLUSION.

I have no desire to weary the reader, and so say nothing of the inner life of the midshipmen—their recreations and daily routine of exercises; nor of a multitude of other things that might be told.

In conclusion, I will say this: while our Naval Academy, like every other human institution has its faults, yet its design is admirable throughout, as is proved by the class of young men it yearly sends out into the navy—young men well read in the art and circumstances of war, who when opportunity is afforded them, will achieve victories more brilliant than those won by the Perrys, Decaturs and Farraguts of other years.

MAILLI.

The Parting of the Ways.

The old story of the apple is repeated in one form or another in every life. There comes a time in the history of each individual when for himself he chooses good or evil. A little thing may turn the current of his life, and cause it to flow in the peaceful ways of virtue, or send it foaming over the cataracts and through the whirlpools of vice, or some towering passion may sweep across the chords of life, and in one fearful hour decide his fate. Happy he who, in such a crisis, can hear the whisperings of conscience above the warring elements, saying: "This is the way, walk ye in it," and see though darkly through the mists of error the white index-finger of Truth forever pointing upward.

There are some so protected by the watchful care of parents, so hemmed in by circumstances, that to the outward eye they seem free from the temptations that beset such as are set adrift on the broad seas of life. But those deeply versed in the readings of the human heart know that within quiet walls, afar from the scuffle of the great world, the most fearful moral conflicts are carried on, the most decisive moral victories often won.

Not infrequently are young men swept by the strong gusts of youthful passion into courses from which in thoughtful moments they recoil with shuddering. To such the story of Ulysses will not be without its moral. Ancient fable relates that on a lone island in the sea lived the enchantress Circe and her train, the music of whose voices was such that all who heard it were constrained to land upon her shores, where they were immediately changed into dirty swine. The wise Ulysses having occasion to pass that way caused the ears of his companions to be filled with wax that they might not hear his commands, and himself to be chained hand and foot to the mast of the ship that he might not be able to enforce obedience. And when they came near the island, lo! there sat the sirens sending forth such melody as never before fell on mortal ear. Ulysses raved, threatened, implored his companions to turn aside to the neighbring shores, but they could not hear his voice, and, chained as he was, he could not compel acquiescence, and his ship's crew passed in safety by. So we, unless our ears are sealed against the honeyed strains of vice, and our hearts chained to the mast of virtue, will be led away by the embraces of a goddess, far more fatal than the fabled Circe. Though it is never too late to mend, yet he who at the beginning of life chooses the right will save himself how much pain, how many weary steps retraced, how many precious hours of priceless worth! The voice of conscience may for a time be drowned in the rush of the storm, but by-and-by it will speak louder than thunder and in tones that must be heard.

If this inward mother is truly enlightened and cultivated, she will doubtless lead us in right ways. Here we remark that there are a thousand things with which conscience has nothing to do, questions of social propriety, of politeness of common sense. But wherever obedience to moral or to physical law is the point under discussion there conscience should possess the veto power. We hold that man has no more right to transgress the physiological laws of life, to defile, or weaken, or break down his physical constitution, than he has to defile his soul with lying, with profanity, with Sabbath-breaking. Not the soul alone, nor the body alone, but both together make up the entire being, for both alike are destined to immortality; if either is injured the man is crippled and shorn of full power. By bodily indulgence the soul of the man may be brought down to level with that of the brute,

> "——grow clotted by contagion
> ——till she quite lose
> The divine property of her first being.

While the subjection of passion to reason, of appetite to lawful control shall lift the whole being to the high table land of purest virtue.

> "So dear to Heaven is saintly chastity,
> That, when a soul is found sincerely so,
> A thousand liveried angels lacky her,
> Driving far off each thing of sin and guilt;
> And in clear dream and solemn vision,
> Tell her of things that no gross ear can hear;
> Till oft converse with heavenly habitants
> Begin to cast a beam on the outward shape,
> The unpolluted temple of the mind,
> And turn it by degrees to the soul's essence
> Till all be made immortal."

Parents who send forth a son or daughter into life with clear views of right and wrong, with just ideas of duty and self-interest thus anticipate for them the victory over temptation, and forearm the youthful athlete for the trying hour. A child trained up in the way he should go may for a time wander from that way, but he will return again, and not depart from it.

There be now standing at the parting of the ways young men, young women considering which path they shall take. Pleasure beakons adown an avenue strewn with flowers and melodious with song, where self-indulgence fills the hours with gayety and gratifies every passing wish, but at the end of that avenue is not honor, or live, or peace. Serene and calm sits virtne at the opening of the other path, narrow and rugged, but ever leading upward, and at the end is a crown of glory, while all along the way bloom flowers of sweetest fragrance, and the faces that are found therein are bright with hope and radient with peace.

Have You Seen Her.?—A lady who for the last five years has been a leader of fashion in New York, and who may be seen twice a week in her elegant calache driving a pair of superb ponies in Central Park, has recently stated, in the select circle to which she belongs, that the only article in existence which imparts beauty and lustre to the complexion without ultimately imparing the texture of the skin and causing it to collapse and wrinkle, is Hagan's Magnolia Balm. The name of the distinguished member of the beau monde who made this declaration cannot with propriety be given, but it may be mentioned en passant that she has spent several years of her life in Europe and is familliar with all the arts and preparations employed by the court beauties of the old world to enhance their charms.

FARMER'S CHILDREN.

The editor of the NORTH CAROLINIAN is a friend of the Farmer and especially a friend of farmer's children. He was reared on a farm and of course he "knows how it is himself." He knows something of the struggles, something of the hopes and aspirations, and something of the discouragements of these young friends of his. And profoundly impressed with the conviction that farmer's children are the hope and the life of this great nation, he has done and will continue to do all in his power to aid them to exert the best influence in the important sphere they are called upon to occupy.

We repeat, that farmer's children are the hope and the life of the country. If they grow up intelligent, moral, patriotic, there is hope for a continuance of free institutions. Seven-tenths of the children of America are born on a farm. They have the preponderance in numbers, as well as they have in strength and influence. They grow up hearty, robust, active, industrious. They become our most active business men in our cities and town. Our cities would soon degenerate were it not for the fresh blood infused into them from the country every year. Go to the most enterprizing and successful men in our large cities to-day, and especially in the West, and ask them where they were born: and they will tell you upon a farm—perhaps in a cabin. Ask your most successful lawyers, ministers and physicians where they came from, and they will tell you the country.

There is more in farmer's children than most people look for, and there might be much more still. Do our readers ask how? We will tell them. By furnishing these children in the country better facilities for education. It is the mind and the morals that make the man. The man must become educated to become useful. The "ignoramus" does not make an impression upon the body politic. Ignorance does not rule, but intelligence does. If we would have society become better, we must educate our children.

As a rule farmer's children are educated in the common school. Good common schools are doing more for the people, for the country, for good morals, than any other instrumentality. They must be encouraged. Those having them in their keeping must employ the best teachers, visit them, give them their influence, and sustain them in every possible way. They should constantly strive to secure the best—not the cheapest—teachers. They must employ those whose hearts are in their work; who love their vocation; who do not teach simply to make a few dollars, but because they feel that they are performing an important duty which they wish to do honestly and well

GOOD NATURE

We believe in good nature in politics as well as anything else. Being ill natured, cross, sour and unhappy not only don't do any good, but there is no sense in it. Because men dont happen to agree as to the merits of this or that candidate or public measure is no reason why they should quarrel or be unfriendly. Honest men have their convictions and are adherents to what they believe to be principles. But they should always be willing to concede as much as they claim. Because they honestly differ with each other is no reason they should indulge in hard personal feelings or make an oblation of friendship on the altar of party. Not at all. And we are glad to know that a better feeling is existing here among all parties. Most of the bitterness engendered by the heated campaigns has passed away. Good nature and good feeling predominate. All parties are uniting to promote the common good. It is as it should be.

Congress has removed the disabilities from L. Q. C. LAMAR, Representative elect to the next Congress from North Eastern Mississippi. He was a member of the XXXVth Congress, and is elected to the XLIIId Congress for the district now represented by Mr. Morphis. His letter to the House asking for amnesty was read by the Clerk, and concludes as follows: "Your memorialist would not sue for such special legislation in his favor if he was not, after due self-examination, conscious of his entire fidelity to the interests and happiness of the people of the United States, and to the Constitution and laws thereof."

Dr. Dio Lewis proposes to save a vast amount of money by persuading the people of this world that they can live sumptuously on $2 50 a month. His bill of fare is hulled corn, milk, oat meal, hominy, cracked wheat and beans.—Ex.

Well for our part we would not like to board at his Hotel. A little beef once in a while, and now and then a turkey is nourishing. That's our experience.

Bets are being made West that Brigham Young won't live till spring.

THE COMPENSATIONS OF NATURE.

Though all men are in some sense alike, having the ground work of a common humanity, yet, all are different; no one ever met any two that were precisely the same. If any one man excels his fellows in any particular thing, they for their part excel him in something else. Each one finds a certain groove in which his faculties, whatever they are, run with comparative ease—perhaps every one has a genius for something. The man of culture need not despise the tiller of the soil, for without him all his vaunted gifts would not save him from starving. All are dependent on each other, however high or however low; all were made to work together in harmony, and in kindly consideration each for the other. Indeed, there could be no harmony or any great result produced without these wonderful diversity of gifts. Which is of the most value, whether gifts of mind, or of that remarkable skill of hand which many posses, is not so easy to determine. The Scholar perhaps disclaims what he calls the groveling pursuits of his neighbors, and they, in turn laugh at his awkwardness, his want of sound, practical sense in every day affairs, and boast that they know much better how to succeed in life. The talker calls the silent person dull, but without him might be without a listener. And so it goes; we take the world as we find it, and according to our fitness to perform the duties of our allotted sphere, and find it in general a very desirable world to live in after all. But kindness and charity will smooth wonderfully its rough edges, and it behooves us to carry ourselves quietly and without pride towards our fellow men, not knowing how soon we may need their services and good will, in some straits unforeseen to-day. He, who does otherwise, is short sighted, and will be apt to repeat to-morrow, and life is not long enough to afford many such repentances. Kind consideration toward others, and a moderate opinion of ourselves, is the safest rule under all circumstances.

Our old and much esteemed friend WILLIAM BURGESS, of Millville, Pa., has just been confirmed by the United States Senate as Indian Agent for the Pawnees in Nebraska. It is an excellent appointment and our most hearty wishes go with our new friend out to his new field of labor and usefulness.

Senator MERRIMON is receiving any number of compliments "over the left" from his old professed political friends in this State. It turns out that their want of confidence in him is due to the fact that he was a loyal Union man during the war. He can stand it if they can.

New Books, Periodicals, &c.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE FOR 1873.—This well known magazine is invaluable to American readers as a thorough as well as fresh compilation of a generally inaccessible, but indispensable current literature, —generally inaccessible because of its great bulk and cost; indispensible because it embraces the productions of the ablest living writers in science, fiction, poetry, history, biography, politics, theology, philosophy, critism and art.

Among the distinguished authors lately represented in its pages are Matthews-Arnold, Chas, Kingsly, George MacDonald, Miss Thackeray, Max Mullen, Karl Blind, Prof. Tyndall, Sir Robert Lytiot, Prof. Huxley, James Anthony Froude, Jean Ingelow, The Duke of Argyll, Prime Minister Gladstone, Miss Mulock, Erckmann-Chatrain, Arthur Helps, Fritz Renter, Julia Kavanahh, Tennyson, Browing, etc., etc.

Besides the productions of the leading British authors as contained in the great mass of British periodical literature, the plan of the magazine includes translations from the best writers of the Europone continent, and it is to begin with the new volume, (January 1st.) the publication of a translation of one of the finest stories of the charming P [illegible] Deutch's author Fritz Reuter, as will be seen by reference to the prospectus published elsewhere in this paper. It will also be noticed that the publishers offer some extra inducements to subscribers who may wish to club with other leading periodicals. Certainly the amount of the best current literature of the world offered by these club terms, cannot otherwise be obtained so cheeply.

The Living Age is generally pronounced "the best of the eclectics." It is the Comprehensive of periodicals, and in the great multiplicity of quarterlies, monthlies and weeklies, all of which it represents with a satisfactory completeness nowhere else attempted, it has become almost a necessity to every person or family of intelligence and taste.

OLD AND NEW FOR 1873.—The Editor of OLD AND NEW premises his readers to give them in 1873, two volumes even better than the previous ones. They are to include sereals by Mr. Hale, Mrs, Greenough, and other first-class writers; short stories by Mrs. Stowe, Miss Meredith, Mrs. Whitney, Miss Hale' &c.; the continuauce of Mr. Martineau's wise and cheerful series of papers on the relations between God and Man; a series of papers on most interesting public questions, such as Railroads and their power; Woman Suffrage; Labor and Wages; the Problems of the New Administration, and the like. Provision has also been made for articles on interesting points in natural history and philosophy, by such authorities as Prof. J. P. Lesley, President Thos. Hill, Dr. Gray, Mrs. W. H. Dall, Dr. Kellogg, &c., and for the enlargement and improvement of the critical, record, and art departments. The Magazine will thus more fully than ever before, afford at once an abundant supply of first-class light reading, and an entertaining record of the most important items of human progress for the time being.

The Supreme Court of Wisconsin have just decided a case against the Western Union Telegraph Company, holding them responsible for the prompt transmission of dispatches, and liable for pecuniary losses growing out of their delay.

OUR CORRESPONDENCE

From Woodville—Report of Cotton Shipments.

Woodville, N. C., Dec. 16th, 1872.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

I here give you a statement (as near as I can), of the number of bales of cotton that has been shipped from this place this season, including what is here ready for shipment, together with the names of some of our most extensive shippers, viz:

Shippers:	No. of Bales.
James H. Hyatt,	160.
Joseph G. Granberry,	70.
Joseph F. Newby,	60.
W. W. Woodard,	42.
W. C. Lowry,	40.
William Wilson,	36.
W. B. Overman, for Hon. Jno. Pool,	36.
Hon. C. C. Pool,	8.
Wm. McCoy,	8.
Total	460.

Besides this about one hundred bales have been shipped by persons whose names I will not mention, making in all, 560 bales. Many of the farmers in this vicinity are holding back their cotton until it will demand a higher price.

The Pneumonia is quite prevalent in this community. Several have died with it, but principally colored people.

Q.

Legislature.

In the Senate the past week a number of resolutions and bills were offered and referred. Among them was a bill to sell the pershable property of the State. Mr. Grandy offered a bill to repeal chapter 179 of the public laws of 1870–71, and re-enact chapter 90 of the public laws of 1869–'70, requiring a suit to be instituted against the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal Company. Referred. A resolution has been introduced to pay James McQueen, alias Dunahoe—who shot and killed Boss Strong, one of the Lowery outlaws—the reward offered by the State for his capture of Strong's body was not recovered; hence this action to obtain the reward.

In the House the bill in relation to the Governor and Treasurer's salary was passed, provides that the Governor shall be paid $4.000 per annum and the Treasurer $2.000. Mr. Darden's bill to prohibited the sale of spirituous liquors within one mile of Winfall, Perquimans County was passed.

On the 12th the two houses met in joint session to consider the returns of the August election. It appearing that the official returns of Macon and Watauga had not been received as yet, the joint session adjourned until the 18th inst., in order that the same might be obtained. The Clerk read the following as the returns exclusive of these counties:

Governor—Caldwell, 98,002; Merrimon, 65,576. Lieu. Gov.—Brogden, 96,957; Hughes, 94,844. Sec. State—Howerton, 96,073; Womack, 93,853. Auditor—Reilly, 96,464; Leaventhrope, 94,638. Treasurer—Jenkins, 97,571.—Supt. Pub. Works—Burns, 96,929; Separk, 93,005. Supt. Pub. Instruction—Reid, 97,020; Mendenhall, 93,089. Attorney General—Hargrove, 97,009; Shipp, 94,712.

Congress.

In the Senate a number of important bills have been offered. Mr. Cole offered a joint resolution to amend the Constitution so as to elect the President and Vice President and Senators of the United States by direct vote of the people. The bill abolishing assessors, with some amendments, was passed and goes back to the House. Senator Stevens has been appointed Regent of the Smithsonian Institute, vice Senator Davis, deceased.

The bills allowing soldiers and sailors in the late war to enter land warrants, and the pension bills have passed. The latter appropriates thirty and a half millions. General Banks introduced a bill providing for an increase of the President's salary to 50,000 annually after the 4th, of March, 1873. He also introduced a proposition to amend the Constitution so as to limit the President to one term. Both propositions went to the Judiciary Committee. The House voted in favor of amnesty, but not by a majority sufficient to carry the measure. The vote stood 102 to 84. Two-thirds being necessary, the effort goes over for the present. A bill to amend the Constitution so as to fix a uniform way for holding State election, and another to extend for four years the operation of the law creating the Southern Claims Commission were introduced.

Handsome new carpets of American manufacture have been placed in the East room of the White House, and in the halls on the main floor. The East Room carpet is of a very heavy velvet, and of handsom patern. The ugly carpet presented by the Sultan of Turkey, which has covered rather than adorned the floor of this room for a year past, has been cut up and used for the halls on the upper floor.

The recent decision of the Attorney-General relative to the right of postmasters to suppress obscene matter passing through the mails does not declare that such copy, when there is positive evidence of its being indecent and in violation of law, shall not be expelled from the mails by post-officials, but asserts that postmasters have no right to break open seals upon suspicion that the copy contained in the package is of an obscene and improper character.

Senator Schurz has written a letter to Senator Thurman, explaining that his acceptance of the place tendered him by the Democrats on the Committee of Foreign Affairs must not be regarded as committing him to the support of the Democratic party; or as in any way compromising his independence. Senator Thurman replied that this was perfectly well understood beforehand by the Democratic Senators.

The bill introduced by Senator Pomeroy, to organize the Territory of Oklohama, was prepared by him in accordance with the recomendation of the President in his annual message. It is not intended to dispose of lands or to promote settlement of the Territory, except by Indians. The sole purpose is to establish and execute propper civil law, and to prepare it for the civilization of all the tribes.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue will ask the committee of conference on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the internal revenue bill to recede from the Senate amendment to section 55, authorizing the appointment of twenty-five additional special agents, as the House is evidently not disposed to yield. As this is the only point upon which the two Houses seriously disagree, it is likely that the bill will pass. Senator Morton is of the opinion that it will certainly pass before the holidays.

By direction of the President, the headquarters of the Military Division of the Atlantic are transferred from Philadelphia to New York City.

The Ohio delegation in Congress, Democrats included, have united in a letter to the President asking the appointment of Col. James Harlan, colord, of Cincinati, to some office suitable to his high character and qualifications. He is well known to the President, having spent some time with him at Long Branch two years ago. It is understood that the appointment desired is the misiion to Hati.

The Congress Centennial Celebration Committee held its first meeting on Wednesday. Judge Kelley, the Chairman, was instructed to appear before the Committee on Appropriations and ask an appropriation for printing the stock certigcates. A number of Centennial Commissioners from Philadelphia have had interviews with Congressmen on the subject of the necessary assistance required of Congress to insure the success of the proposed International Exhibition.

Representative Kelley resigned his chairmanship of the Committee on Coinage Weights and Measures and of the Select Committee on the Civil Service in order to devote his time to his duties as chairman of the Select Committee on the Centennial Celebration, to which place he was appointed last week. Mr. Kelley's resignation leaves Mr. Hooper, as the ranking member, chairman of both the Coinage and Civil Service Committees. He is also chairman of the important Committee on Banking and Currency. In view of the fact that many able and experienced members hold no chairmanship, this is an undue share of honors for one member to have.

Mr. Greeley's Will.

The last will of Horace Greeley, dated Nov. 9th, 1872, was produced before Hon. Own T. Coffin, surrogate of Westchester County, on the 6th, and was contentested by Isaiah T. Williams, representing the parties interested in a will made by Mr. Greeley Jan. 6th, 1871. The will of 1871 bequeaths to Mr. Greeley's daughters the bulk of his real estate, and to Ida Greeley his copyrights: it gives the value of one share of the Tribune to the Children's Aid Society, and makes sundry awards to near relatations. The will of 1872 gives everything to Ida L. Greeley, directing her at her own discretion, to apply half of it to the education and support of her sister. The last will was opposed on the ground of the incapacity of the testator to make a will. The testimony of Miss Susan H. Lampson, to the effect that Mr. Greeley was competent to make the will, was taken, and the case was adjourned to Friday.

There has been for a long time a popular prejudice against existing jury law, and the ordering of a "struck" jury in a very important case comes in just in time to prove that the bench virtually admits that the law is sometimes inadequate. It has been erroneously stated in various journals that this is the first instance of a special jury in the United States. Such juries have served in several instances in New York. A "struck" jury is one selected from a panel of forty-eight reputable citizens, the superflous three dozen being disposed of partly by lot and partly through alternate striking's-out by the opposing counsel. The case which is to be tried by the jury in question is that for the recovery of the great Jumel estate, consisting of a hundred and twenty-five acres of land on the upper part of Manhattan Island, besides a number of downtown lots. The whole is valued at some six million dollars. The case has been tried once and excited much interest all over the country, but the coming trial will be far more complete in its details and exhaustive in its examinations. Briefly it is this: Nelson Chase was the reputed owner of the estate, having acquired it as the husband of the heir of Madame Jumel, and by purchase. George W. Bowen claims to be the illegitimate on of Madame Jumel, and therefore heir to her estates. The leading counsel are Mr. Charles O'Conor for the defence, and ex-Attorney-General E. R. Hoar for the plaintiff.

The London Globe says: "And now it appears that black pepper is adulterated with soapstone, sawdust, increasing the weight rapidly. We haven't heard what soapstone sawdust is addlterated with yet:"

The Cleveland Banner, edited by Plato Durham, Esq., says: "We have authority for stating, that there will be no further arrests in this section of the State, under the Ku Klux acts of Congress. All persons who have left home from an apprehension of trouble under these acts, can at once return, if they desire, and they will not be molested."

Edwin Forrest, the tragedian, whose name is more widely known than that of any actor this country has ever produced, died suddenly on last Thursday morning at his residence, on North Broad street, Philadelphia, while dressing. Mr. Forrest's health has not been good for some years past, and his death can hardly be called unexpected. He was born on the 6th, of March, 1806, consequently he was in his sixty-seventh year at the time of his demise.

A DRUG STORE WORTH SEEING

To the Editor of the North Carolinian

During a recent visit to your little City I was among other things attracted by the new Drug Store of Dr. J. N. BUTT, No. 75 Road Street, and I cannot resist the impulse to ask your readers to call and see it, as it is not surpassed by any you will meet in the South, not in Baltimore will you find one more elegantly fitted up except its deficiency in gas lights which the Doctor hopes to supply soon. It is a two story brick building, 65 by 27 feet, with dwelling above. The lower story is divided into Dispensing Room, Office, Ware Room and Laboratory. The Store Room is very light. The front being entirely of plate glass, nine pieces 90 inches long, with two doors and one window, glass 56 x 90. The doors being double, shut one upon the other, and when open, as in summer, are folded back into a recess to the wall, making a straight line with the door and an elegant finish. The doors and flanges to the same being of plate glass, 90 inches long, does not impede the light open or shut. The floor is almost even with the pavement and is covered with a carpet of cocoa matting. There are two counters on either side, 12 feet long, beautifully white splendidly finished, and of good design with Italian marble tops. Their ends 8 feet from the doors, pass at right angle to the wall. On the right hand one is a Tennessee Marble Fountain, and on the other an Aquarium of Gold and other Fish. On either side between the door and counter, is a fine silver mounted walnut Show Case, 5 feet high, fastened to the wall a beautiful and attractive ornament to display Fancy Articles, and in the rear a Poison Case of the same kind. Three find silver mounted and one plate glass Prescription Case, with scroll and clock on top, and one fine balance scale adorn the counters. There are over 120 drawers which make a fine display, they are of sweet gum varnished, which is the prettiest wood that could be used. The shelves are supported on iron brackets, at the terminus of which, 3 feet from the ceiling, is a snow white cornice, interlined with two strips of gilt moulding. The wall and entire store is pure white except the drawers and when lighted presents a very imposing display.

Last but not least, is the "little jewel" of an office, which is so much needed by every business man. The Doctor is doing, as he tells us, an extensive and lucrative office practice. It is fitted up in fine style, with every modern necessity and examinations are made with as much privacy as in your own home. The Laboratory is not yet finished, but when done will be a very responsible part of the establishment. The Doctor keeps a large stock of gold pertaining to the Drug Trade. VISITOR.

THIS WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

We call attention to the following new advertisements in this issue.

Valuable Property for sale.
Court Notices.
Palins Store.
Old and New.
Notice.
Bankrupt Notice.

Local and Personal.

Court is in session here this week.

Senator POOL and family have returned home.

Our Woodville correspondent will accept our thanks for his report. Keep us posted.

Senator GRANDY and Representative GODFREY have returned to spend the holidays at home.

Our townsman GEO. W. BAKER has received a Patent for a Machine for Turning logs. It is a valuable invention.

Hon. J. W. ALBERTSON attended another important meeting of the National Centennial Commission at Philadelphia last week.

The New Berne Republic and Courier of a late date contains a lengthy editorial biographical sketch of our townsman Hon. GEO. W. BROOKS.

Do not scant your Turkeys now. Give them all the corn they can eat for you have only one week more to feed some of them in. Next week is Christmas.

We are sorry to learn of the death of EDWARD WOOD Esq., of Edenton which occurred some weeks ago. He had long been an invalid. It is reported that his life was insured for $90,000

F. M. COOK has removed his Jewelry Store into WOODS Block, preparatory to erecting, at his old stand, a new and large building. He believes in progress. Success to all such men.

A theif entered the bedroom of W. J. MORRISETT Esq, of Camden on Sunday night last and abstracted money and checks from his pockets amounting to several hundred dollars. A bold act.

The new Pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. GEO. E. BOOKER, has arrived. He occupied the pulpit on Sabbath morning and evening last and made a decidedly favorable impression.

Since our last we have had something of a snow storm—a reminder to us of our old Pennsylvania Winters. Had we been prepared for it—with sleigh and jingling bells—we should certainly have had a sleigh ride.

Eureka Lodge 317 is now working under a regular charter. The officers were installed in their Hall at this place last night by Past Master SPEED. The regular communications will be held on the first and third Monday nights of each month.

One word to our young correspondent T. J. H. If you have talents industry will improve them; if moderate abilities, industry will supply their deficiencies. Nothing is denied to well directed labor; nothing is ever attained without it.

We hold that the profits of farming should consist, in a large measure, in the improvement of the farm itself and its belongings, and there can be no better investment than this. That is very poor farming, if worthy to be called farming, which, though it may nominally show a cash balance, leaves the homestead in a worse instead of a better condition than it found it.

The last of the interesting and entertaining series of articles on the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis Md., appears in our paper this week. We thank the writer for preparing them. They have given us and many of our readers an amount of information we had never known before. We hope our correspondent, as he finds leisure, will favor us with other effusions from his pen.

We sometimes hear people talk about happiness being meted out to men in equal portions! But think of the difference between the man who has the gift of always hearing pleasant things said of himself behind his back, and the man who has the disease of always listening to ill natured things said about himself in his absence. It is doubtful in nine cases out of ten, whether in either instance they are real utterances; but, by the aid of fancy, we hear a great deal about ourselves that has never been spoken by mortal tongue!

While the Farmer should give himself leisure, at this season of the year, for reading, study and social recreation, he must not for a moment entertain the idea that he has time for idleness or aimless lounging about the country store or tavern. In our delightful climate, the winter furnishes the proper time for doing much of the heaviest work of the farm. Fence building, stump pulling, ditching, and the general clearing up, of which there is always enough to be done should be pushed energetically, so as not to stand in the way of the early preparation for the next season's crops. Above all, the fences must not be neglected. Some of the worst annoyances and heaviest losses to which the farmer is subjected, result from inadaquate fences; and, later in the season, when other work will press, it will be very difficult to give them the attention they require.

Yielding to the custom of the times, and in order to give the force of the CAROLINIAN an opportunity to enjoy the festivities of the holidays, there will be no paper issued from this office next week. Our next issue, therefore, will appear on the first day of the new year 1873.

Our Weldon correspondent must excuse us. It was old DEAN SWIFT who said:

'Tis an old maxim in the schools,
That flattery is the food of fools;
Yet now and then your men of wit
Will condescend to take a bit.—

But really our friend lays it on too thick for our modesty to publish. But we tip our beaver, nevertheless.

Our erudite friend FRED S. PROCTOR Esq., has handed us the following item, taken from an article of Prof. J. DORMAN STEELE in a late number of the American Educational Monthly:

Again, Carolina is said to be named from Charles IX of France. I admit the name was originally applied to Ribaut's fort in 1562, at Port Royal, and afterward to Loudonniere's on the St. John. But these settlements were failures, and the first permanent colonies were planted by the English upon the grant given in 1663 to Samuel Clarendon and others by Charles II. The name originally was merely local, i. e., the forts were thus designated. In the patent of 1663 it was formally applied to the territory afterward divided into North and South Carolina, and, being given by Charles II, it is natural to suppose that these States were named after him rather than after a king of France who had been dead over a half of a century when the colonies were established.

The public meeting held in the Court House on Monday last to give expression to the popular feeling on the subject of Immigration was a decided success. Col. WM. F. MARTIN was called to the chair and Hon. C. C. POOL, FRANK VAUGHAN Esq., and JOHN T. PRICE, Register of Deeds, were appointed Secretaries. The object of the meeting was ably and eloquently expressed by the chairman. He not only pledged the movement his best efforts but he sounded the key note of Progress and Developement in his earnest tribute to the dignity and respectability of honest labor. He was followed by his Honor Judge ALBERTSON in a speech of some length, most heartily and most earnestly endorseing the purposes of the meeting. He was followed by W. H. SMITH Esq, Senator GRANDY, Ex Senator SPEED, Hon. C. C. POOL, Dr. P. JOHN, J. P. WHEDBEE Esq., and others. The meeting was attended by the leading citizens of this and adjoining counties and all manifested a deep interest in the proceedings. A Committee was appointed to report officers for a permanent organization to an adjourned meeting on Saturday next at 3 o'clock P. M. A carefully prepared report of this and the next meeting will be published in our next issue.

LOCAL PORT-FOLIO.

One thing that can always be found—and that's fault. The only thing which keeps Lent—a good umbrella. The worst tax of all—attacks of gout. Don't always have great weight—heavy speeches. A table of interest—the dinner table. The trade that never turns to the left—a wheelwrights. The sere and yellow leaf—tobacco. The rest of the week—Sunday. An essay on man—a woman's attempt to marry him. A coming event—the next issue of the NORTH CAROLINIAN.

Business Locals.

Be sure and read the new advertisement of Captain Palins Store.

Christmas is coming, and so is more new Goods for Fowler.

What more gratifying to a hungry man than a good meal of victuals. The place to get it is at Fulmers Saloon on Water Street.

Always especially happy to wait on their North Carolina friends—Lowenburg and Jacobs, of Norfolk Va. When you go there be sure and make them a call. Remember the place—22 & 24 Maket Square.

The BLEES Noiseless Lock Stitch Sewing Machine certainly has superior advantages over all others. These advantages consist in greater speed, less noise and an adaptation for a greater variety of work. Walter Scott of this city is the Agent. By the way, he has attachments for all the other Sewing Machines. It will pay to give him a call.

The Misses Greeley have, it is said, been offered $10,000 per share for their father's interest in the Tribune. These shares represent $1,000 each.

There is an effort being made in Stokes county to change the name of the county seat to Saura Town, the object being to preserve the name of the former owners of that section, the Saura Indians.

A gallant Alabama editor, in "noticing" a grocery kept by a woman, says: "Her tomatoes are as red as her own cheeks, her indigo as blue as her own eyes, and her pepper as hot as her own temper."

It is stated that a gentleman recently arrived from Paris says that the notorious Josephene Mansfield appeared in that city some weeks ago. She had about $37,000 in money. This she deposited in the banking house of Bowles Bros. When the failure of that house was announced she wrung her hands and declared that she was ruined. It is not probable that she will recover a cent of her money. She was the woman connected with the late "Jim" Fisk.

Mr. Greeley was never an ardent friend of colleges or universities. He believed in what he called "practical education." Mr. Andrew D. White calls to mind an interview between Mr. Greeley and Professor Fisher, of Yale College, at which he was present, in which Mr. Greeley advanced his peculiar ideas, and spoke of Mr. Lincoln as a man for whom neither colleges nor universities had done anything, remarking. "He is the best educated man I ever knew; he can see a point and make five thousand other men see it."

DEATHS.

PERRY.—At Woodville, on the 11th inst., Miss ELVINA PERRY. Aged 16 years 10 months and 18 days.

THE GREAT PICTORIAL ANNUAL.—Hostetter's United States Almanac for 1873, for distribution gratis throughout the United States, and all civilized countries of the Western Hemisphere, is now published and ready for delivery in the English, German, French, Norwegian, Welsh, Swedish, Holland, Bohemian and Spanish languages, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health should read and ponder the valuable suggestions it contains. In addition to an admirable medical treatise on the causes, prevention and cure of a great variety of diseases, it embraces a large amount of information interesting to the merchant, the mechanic, the miner, the farmer, the planter and professional man; and the calculations have been made for such meridians and latitudes as are most suitable for a correct and comprehensive NATIONAL CALENDER.

The nature, uses, and extraordinary sanitary effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the staple tonic and alterative of more than half the Christian world, are fully set forth in its pages, which are also interspersed with pictorial illustrations, valuable recipes for the household and farm, humorous anecdotes, and other instructive and amusing reading matter, original and selected. Among the Annuals to appear with the opening of the year, this will be one of the most useful and may be had for the asking. The proprietors, Messrs Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood. The Bitters are sold in every city, town and village, and are extensively used throughout the entire civilized world.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Sick Stock.

Very often a farmer or his boys may be heard relating how that horse has put in the Spring crops without a mouthful of grain, or in what condition he keeps on grass alone, or how the cows were Wintered without any hay, or the sheep lay out nights all Winter, and keep so well on corn fodder. Just as often the farmer will boast that his team has hauled 50 bushels of corn, up a very steep hill, or travelled 90 miles and went to plowing next day, or the 3 year old colts have "plowed their 40 acres this Spring, and have never yet smelled oats." These boastings are very common Possibly no direct ill-effects follow, but by and by one of these horses falls lame most unaccountably, or the hide looks tight and the hair stands up, and something very mysterious is the matter with the colts, and the cows lose their calves, or have the hollow-horn or foul foot, and the sheep are afflicted with many of those ailments which in their case often occur under the very best treatment. Then one never hears of the remote and always forgotten cause, and the farmer exhausts the wisdom of his neighbors, and tries all their nostrums, and as a last resource, writes to his agricultural editor, who is as a matter of course, never instructed as to the probable origin of the trouble. Now cures do not happen in so many as five cases in a hundred of sick or disabled animals on a farm, and almost invariably the trouble might have been prevented had certain simple rules been remembered and acted on. Never starve the stock and then over feed them. Never overwork horses, and especially colts. Feed young stock with the best and most nutritious food, and lay a foundation for the drafts to be made on them in the future. Administer at regular stated times a certain portion of salt, sulphur, wood ashes and powdered charcoal, or place these condiments where they can be reached at least weekly. Shelter all stock, old and young, in clean dry sheds, both during the cold of Winter and the heats of Summer. In short, care for domestic animals reasonably and thoughtfully, remembering they are as subject to all the evil effects of exposure or neglect or abuse as human beings.

Practical Recipes.

A New Way to Wash Linen.—A new mode of washing linen has been introduced and adopted in Germany. The operation consists in dissolving two pounds of soap in about three gallons of water as hot as the hand can bear, and adding this one tablespoonful of turpentine and three of liquid ammonia; the mixture must then be well stirred and the linen steeped in it for two or three hours, taking care to cover up the vessel which contains them as nearly hermetically as possible. The clothes are afterward washed out and rinsed in the usual way. The soap and water may be reheated and used a second time, but in that case half a tablespoonful ot turpentine and a tablespoonful of ammonia must be added. The process is said to cause a great economy in time labor and fuel.

When linen has been scorched, use the following remedy: Add to a quart of vinegar the juice of half a dozen large onions, about an ounce of soap rasped down, a quarter of a pound of fuller's earth, an ounce of lime and one ounce of pearl-ash. Boil the whole until it is pretty thick, and spread some of it upon the scorched part. Allow it to remain until dry, then scrape it off and wash. Two or three applications will restore the linen, unless so much scorched that the fabric is destroyed.

A cut lemon kept on the wash-stand, and rubbed over the hands daily, after washing, and not wiped off for some minutes, is an excellent remedy for chapped hands.

To tint the walls of a room buff, which in many cases is a striking and pretty color, add yellow ochre to the whitewash until the color suits you.

Lemon juice will allay the irritation caused by the bites of mosquitoes and flies.

An oyster shell put into a tea-kettle will prevent its being covered with scale.

The juice of bean pods is a cure for warts.

The Housewife.

How to Make Good Yeast.—For a small family, take one ounce of dried hops and two quarts of water. Boil them fifteen minutes; add one quart of cold water, and let it boil for a few minutes; strain, and add half a pound of flour—putting the latter into a basin and pouring on the water slowly to prevent its getting lumpy-one-fourth pound of brown sugar, and a handful of fine salt. Let it stand three days, stirring it occasionally. Little bubbles will soon rise in it. When it ferments well, add six potatoes which have been boiled, mashed and run through a colander, making them as smooth as possible. This yeast will keep a long while, and has the advantage of not taking any yeast to start it with. It rises so quickly that a less quantity of it must be put in than of ordinary yeast.

Meat Balls.—Chop the meat fine, as for sausages; then mix a small quantity of crumbs of bread and a seasoning of mace, pepper, cloves and salt, all well pounded; mix these with an egg, and make the mass into balls the size of a goose egg. Roll them in bread crumbs and egg, and fry them a light brown; dish them up with a gravy flavored with walunt catsup.

Graham Bread.—To make Graham bread, to each quart of flour take a heaped teaspoonful of saleratus, adding salt and a little molasses or sugar, with a sufficient quantity of sour milk to make the dough. We consider it very much better to steam an hour or two, and then put it in the oven to brown over.

Cold-Water Sponge Cake.—Three eggs, beat ten minutes; one and one-half cups of sugar, beat five minutes; one cup of flour, one spoonful of cream of tartar, beat one minute; one-half cup cold water, spoonful of saleratus, one cup of flour, a little salt, beat one minute.

An easy way to get rid of cockroaches is to spread sprigs of tansy where they leave. It is also effective in driving away black ants.

A good waterproofing for the soles of boots and shoes may be made with a little bees-wax and mutton suet, warmed in a pipkin until in a liquid state; then rub some of it lightly over the edges of the soles where the stitches are, which will repel the wet, and not the least prevent the blacking from having the usual effect.

Don't Hawk, Hawk, Spit, Spit. Blow, Blow, and disgust everybody with your Catarrh and its offensive odors when Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will speedily distroy all oder and arrest the discharge.

Illinoise has produced another beautiful blonde clergywoman in the person of the Rev. Miss Jennie Tracy, aged sweet sixteen, who is turning the hearts and heads of sinners in the town of Elgin.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE.
OF VALUABLE
NORTH CAROLINA LANDS, FOR SALE BY
GEORGE D. POOL.
Real Estate Agent,
ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

In presenting my list of lands and other properties for sale, I would say that no section of the United States offers such inducements for capitalists and emigrants, as this section of North Carolina. In longevity and healthfulness, it will compare favorably with any where and in easy and cheap transportation of products to market, in pleasantness of climate, in the sociability of the people, in great fertility, and durability of soil, no section can equal it.

A railroad will soon be built to Weldon, putting this place in direct communication by Rail, with the whole United States. This, together with our great fishing, farming and manufacturing interests, and certain early completion of already projected works of improvement for putting in nearer, cheaper and easier communication with the Ocean, will render this one of the most important commercial, and manufacturing points on the Southern country.

A Steam Saw and Grist Mill in the town of Nixonton 8 miles from E. City. This Mill has a fine wharf and store attached on deep navigable water, the engine is 40 horse power, a dall in good order. It is one of the finest locations to be found any where for custom work, and for getting good saw logs easily and cheaply. Price $4,000 cash.

Adjoining the mill property is 40 acres of fine land on the River, with three houses, all for $1200. Near the same is a good two story dwelling and 13 acres of land for $2.000, and a good one story dwelling, with one acre of land for $300.

Also two fine farms in Pasquotank county, 10 miles from E. City, within half mile of church, school house and post office. One tract contains about 400 acres, with fair buildings and mostly cleared, and the other contains 300 acres, with good two story dwelling, large barn, and other outhouses, both are offered at $20 per acre, one third cash, balance in one and two years.

Also one other tract in Pasquotank county, containing 116 acres, within one mile of the town with fine buildings, mostly cleared and in cultivation. Price $25 per acre, one half cash, balance in 12 months.

A valuable site for a hotel at Nag's Head, 40 miles from Elizabeth City, and 50 miles from Edenton. This is situated immediately on the Ocean, and is a famous Summer resort for invalids, and those seeking health, comfort, and amusements during the summer months. It is in direct communication by steam boats and railroad with all parts of North Carolina, Virginia, and the North; and is equal in natural advantages to Newport, or Cape May. Visitors flock to this famous summer resort by hundreds and thousands, and a large amount of money can be made by a hotel. A charter has been obtained from the Legislature of N. C., for a joint stock company to build the hotel. There is now an old hotel on the spot, which could be cheaply repaired and bought for $3.000. This hotel, though imperfectly kept, cleared the proprietor last season, over $3.000. For a man or a company, having some capital, this is one of the finest chances to make money at hotel keeping to be found anywhere. The early attention of the public is invited to this property. Sold.

A fine steam saw and grist mill at Hertford, the county seat of Perquimans County, N. C., 18 miles from Elizabeth City. This mill has a fifty horse power engine, now in good running, two pairs of best French burr stones, and two upright saws. The house has a brick basement, and the building is large and in good order. There is one and a half acres of land belonging to this property, and a good two story dwelling, and other out-houses. The section of country adjacent abounds in the finest yellow pine, cypress, ash, poplar, and other valuable timber. This property originally cost $15.000, and is now offered at forced sale for the low price of $3.500, $7.00, cash, and the balance in six equal instalments, six months apart each with interest. Sold.

A fine farm and fishery in same county. The farm contains 400 acres of the finest land, lies immediately on Albemarle Sound where the water is 12 miles wide, and 18 to 20 feet deep, has got buildings, and fine neighborhood. The fishery is on the farm and goes with it. It has a new seine 2,500 yards long, and all the necessary boats, buildings, &c., (which cost over $15,000 two years ago.) The fishery alone, of a good season, will make from 5 to $10,000 profit to the owner. This property is offered at forced sale for the low price of $20,000, $7,000 cash, balance on easy times.

A store at South Mills, in Camden county, 20 miles from E. City, and 20 miles from Norfolk, lying on the canal where steamers pass daily. A fine chance for merchandize. Store is large with dwelling above containing six rooms, is in first rate order, has office, kitchen, dairy, and other necessary outhouses. Goods to the amt. of $50,000 per annum can be sold here, and at large profits. A splendid stand for a country retail store. Price $2,500—one third cash, balance in one and two years.

Price $12,000, one-third cash, balance in one and two years, interest from January, 1871. This is a valuable farm for corn, wheat, and vegetables, and being midway between Elizabeth City and Norfolk, and located where steamers pass by the door daily, is a desirable and cheap property.

A fine farm of 600 acres within six miles of E. City, one mile from navigable water, and the best cotton farm in the State. It is also well adapted to raising corn and wheat. This farm has a splendid two-story dwelling upon it, large barn, 40 by 60 feet, a large number of outhouses, by splendid trees and shrubbery, is in a strong Union neighborhood, and altogether the most desirable place in the county. A little over one-half of this land is cleared, and the balance is covered with the finest yellow pine, poplar, ash and other timber. It is one of the finest farms in the State and is now in good cultivation, contains 585 acres of land, about three-fourths cleared and under cultivation. Price $10,000, one-third cash January 1, next, balance in two equal annual instalments with interest at the rate of six per cent.

A farm of 370 acres 8 miles from town by water, and 12 miles by land, is offered for sale for $10,000 in easy payments. Fronting and looking over, as it does, two large sheets of navigable water, where steamers and sailing vessels are constantly passing, carrying freight and passengers to all parts of the country, its location and surroundings, are of the most fascinating and desirable character. There is a fishery on it ready for working a seine 2,500 yards long, and which commands a portion of both streams of water, and can be made immensely profitable. The price charged is low and the purchase a very desirable one. The buildings consist of a good two-story dwelling and out-houses.

A desirable house and lot in the town of Elizabeth City on the corner of two principal streets, the principal one, and situated in the best business locality in the town. The lot contains about two acres of land, and the buildings consist of a fair dwelling three stories high, containing eight rooms, all in good order, another two story building with four rooms and pantries, dairy, smokehouses, stables, &c. The dwelling has a good cellar under it. There is room on the front lot to erect two good stores, and they would occupy the best stand in the town for merchandize.

A Farm of 200 acres within one mile of Elizabeth City, with good two story dwelling, large barn and stables, and all necessary outhouses, orchard of fine fruit trees, and a large number of ornamental trees and shrubbery around dwelling. SUGAR OF MILK.

Patented July 23d. 1872.

A FARINACEOUS FOOD FOR INVALIDS AND INFANTS.

By the peculiar process in which this preparation is made, all the flesh forming constituents—Earthy and Saline elements of the grain are retained, with none of the Starch, all of which being converted into Dextrine. It contains all the Lime, Sulphur, Phosphorus, Iron and Manganese for the animal juices, and Gum and Fecula for respiration and fatty tissue, with the proteine compounds (Gluten, Albumen &c.) from which nerve and muscular tissues are formed.

It is believed by the most intelligent men that much of the suffering, sickness and mortality of mankind is traceable to deficient or faulty nutrition. The same cause may also be assigned the frequent disappointment of physicians in the result of the action of most approved remedies. We feel sure that this article will supply the deficiency.
